Grow Up Reading™ Tips for September: Counting

- Counting on their fingers is an effective strategy to support children's early math learning. Many children can represent numbers on their fingers before they can say the corresponding number word.
- Anytime you say a number word, you have the opportunity to pair it with a number gesture. When you count out loud to your child, demonstrate with your fingers as well. Parents who use more number gestures have children who use more number gestures.
- Encourage children to represent numbers in whatever way is comfortable for them. Some children struggle to arrange their fingers in specific ways; for example, three and four are particularly tricky. Young children could instead represent three in an unconventional way, such as raising one finger on the left hand and two fingers on the right.
